The National Basketball Association

Maurice Podoloff
NBA President

As the National Basketball Association enters its fifteenth season, further strides have been made toward achieving greater national recognition as the "Major League" of basketball. Just as professional baseball and football improved its status by establishing franchises on the West Coast, the NBA has gained stability and prestige with its movement to Los Angeles. Furthermore, another outstanding class of collegiate stars has enhanced the ranks of all teams and has increased spectator interest throughout the nation. The NBA is divided into two four-team divisions—Eastern and Western. In the Eastern Division are Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Syracuse. In the Western section, along with the Los Angeles Lakers, are St. Louis, Detroit and Cincinnati. Each team plays 13 games with other teams in its own division and ten games with teams in the other division, thus forming a 79-game season. These games decide the final division standings.

At the completion of regular-season competition, the three top teams of each division engage in series to determine division playoff champions. The divisional champs then clash in a best four-of-seven game series to determine the "World Championship of Basketball."

EASTERN DIVISION TEAMS

BOSTON CELTICS

Bob Cousy

Defending World's Champions, the Celtics are considered by many as the finest basketball team ever assembled. This is the team which features the deadly marksmanship of Bill Sharman, Southern California's greatest contribution to basketball; Bob Cousy, the greatest ball-handler and playmaker in NBA history and perhaps the finest "small" man among cage giants; San Francisco's Bill Russell, a fabulous rebounder and incredible defender who allows his mates to concentrate on offense; Tom Heinsohn, a rugged towhead who has developed into the team's top scorer; and Frank Ramsey, the Kentucky battler who ranks as the NBA's No. 1 "pinch hitter." As if this fivesome isn't enough, the Celts bench includes such stellar performers as Washington State's Gene Conley, Oregon's Jim Loscutoff, and the Jones boys—San Francisco's K.C. and North Carolina College's Sam. Tom Sanders, All-America from NYU, has added great strength to the Celtics corners and will serve as Bill Russell's relief.

Coach Red Auerbach has all the ingredients of a fine team at his disposal and handles them well. Last year's Celts had everything . . . height, rebounding, shooting, ball-handling, aggressiveness. Since acquiring Russell four seasons ago, Boston has been the class of the NBA.

The other teams have been waiting for Sharman and Cousy to show their age (both are over 30), but there appears to be sufficient youthful talent to fill their shoes should they slip.

PHILADELPHIA WARRIORS

Wilt Chamberlain

A number of untimely injuries kept the Warriors from making an even stronger challenge to Boston's domination last season. Wilt The Stilt Chamberlain proved his right to be considered among the greatest cagers of all-time by smashing almost every NBA individual scoring and rebounding mark. His height and reach makes him nearly as invincible a defender as Russell and he scores nearly twice as much. Now that Wilt and his mates have had a season to blend their styles, they should be ready to challenge the Celtics. In Paul Arizin, Philly has a 20-point-plus scorer to keep the defense honest on the outside. Tom Gola, finest collegiate cager of his day while performing at LaSalle, and Temple's Guy Rodgers are slick ball-handlers and defenders and also score in double figures. Forward Joe Graboski is a deadly two-hand set shot artist from the corners and outcourt. Ed Conlin, obtained in a pre-season trade, will be battling for the forward slot vacated by Woodie Sauldsberry, who went to St. Louis with Ernie Beck, veteran Warrior guard.

Coach Neil Johnston will be seeking additional bench strength to round out an otherwise fine team. One of the Warriors great problems last season was occasional fatigue of their top five, a group which averaged more playing time per game than any other starting group in the NBA.

SYRACUSE NATS

Dolph Schayes

Under Paul Seymour, who has moved to St. Louis as the Hawks new coach, the Nats relied on great speed, smooth ball-handling, set plays, and Dolph Schayes' great set-shooting. New Coach Alec Hannum used much the same pattern in his previous NBA coaching days at St. Louis. Using this formula, Syracuse has had a history of success. In a tough division, they have never failed to make the post-season play-offs. Although the Nats have chosen not to build around any one player, Schayes has been the perennial bellwether. He has scored over 15,000 career points, most of any NBA player ever, and has been on the All-Star teams a record total. His principal front line help will come from Bob Hopkins (Bill Russell's cousin), Illinois' John (Red) Kerr, who fires in hook shots from an incredibly long distance, Bradley's Barney Cable, and Oregon's Dave Gambee. Rookie Lee Schaefer from North Carolina must develop rapidly if the Nats are to maintain their strong front line.

No team has more speed at guard than All-Star Larry Costello of Niagara, shooting whiz Hal Greer of Marshall, tricky Dick Barnett, and aggressive Al Bianchi. This quartet regularly runs the legs off the opposing teams. Furthermore, all are exceptional set shots from far out.

Reserve center Connie Dierking informed Syracuse officials that he had retired, stripping the team of one of its top rebounders. Combined with the retirement of George Yardley, one of the NBA's all-time great scorers, Syracuse will find the Eastern Division tougher than ever.

Willie Naulls

NEW YORK KNICKS

It's been said that all the Knicks ever needed to challenge for the title was that one big man to sweep the rebounds and defend against the tall opposing centers. The scoring punch has always been there. Much like Boston profited from the talents of Bill Russell, the Knicks are banking heavily on another Bay area performer, 6-10 Darrell Imhoff of California's great team, to provide that missing ingredient which has kept the New Yorkers from the higher reaches of the Division. This is a team studded with well-known West Coast names of top caliber: Willie Naulls, the galloping ghost of UCLA, and Kenny Sears, the 6-9 thin man from Santa Clara. This pair gives the Knicks their principal front line scoring punch. Both average around 20 points per game and are acknowledged as two of the NBA's finest scorers. San Francisco's Mike Farmer does the top defensive job on Elgin Baylor of anyone in the NBA.

Other familiar performers are Louisville's Charley Tyra and "jumpin-jack" John Green of Michigan State. Richie Guerin, who set the NBA back-courtsman mark of 54 points in one game, is remarkable both from the outside and as a driver. With Coach Carl Braun and Dick Garmaker retired, Jackie George and Bob Anderegg must give needed backline support.

WESTERN DIVISION TEAMS

Bob Pettit

ST. LOUIS HAWKS

First place winners in the Western Division for three straight years, World Champions three years ago, the Hawks again feature the high-scoring trio of Bob Pettit of Louisiana State, Kentucky's Cliff Hagan, and Kansas' Clyde Lovellette. They combined to set an NBA mark of 71.7 points per game last season and appear to be improving with age. Pettit at 6-9 is the key man. He has never failed to make the all-league team since coming into the NBA in 1954 and has twice been named Most Valuable Player. Hagan ranks right behind Baylor as the outstanding "middle-sized" performer in the NBA and is consistently among the league's top five scorers. Lovellette, like Hagan a great percentage shooter as well as prolific scorer, has an amazing touch both with his hook shot (best in the NBA) and with a one-hander from well outside.

Paul Seymour, who replaced Easy Ed Macauley as coach, has veteran Larry Foust and Dave Piontek to back his front line. A pre-season trade brought Woodie Sauldsberry, the Los Angeles boy, from Philadelphia and he will certainly add great depth to the front line. Guard Ernie Beck came along in that trade and joins Duquesne's Si Green, Canisius' John McCarthy and Michigan State's Al Ferrari as veteran backcourtsmen. St. Louis also drafted to improve their backcourt since the aging Slater Martin retired. They took Lennie Wilkins of Providence and Fred LaCour from San Francisco, that well-known provider of NBA talent. St. Louis will again be the team to beat for the Western Division title.

DETROIT PISTONS

Gene Shue

One of the Lakers' oldest rivals, first at Fort Wayne (when Fred Schaus starred) and in the latter years as Detroit, the Pistons combine an interesting array of talents. An inconsistent team of late, Detroit has at times shown the finest play in the NBA. Coach Dick McGuire's Pistons dependency ranges from 7-foot Walter Dukes, with the loop's sharpest elbows, to little Gene Shue, the slickest, quickest-shooting guard in the NBA. Between them, one finds Mississippi State's Bailey Howell, a stellar rookie last season who promises to be one of the finest in the years ahead, rugged journeyman Earl Lloyd, Bob Ferry, obtained from St. Louis, hot-shooting Archie Dees of Indiana and Chuck Noble, a good scorer. Among its veterans, the Pistons will have to find the playmaking guard to replace Coach McGuire, unless Tricky Dick stays on the active rolls.

With an obvious void in second-line strength in the front line, the Pistons drafted Louisiana Tech's Jackie Moreland, the most-sought-after prep ever, and Minnesota's finest-ever, 6-7 Ron Johnson, a very talented performer. If either Moreland or Johnson develop as fast as Howell, the Pistons will be very tough, indeed.

CINCINNATI ROYALS

Jack Twyman

They've been waiting three years to get the "Big O", Oscar Robertson, at Cincinnati so the Royals signed him to a three-year contract. It may take that long to complete their rebuilding program but with Robertson available to combine talents with the fabled Jack Twyman, the Royals will be a potent crew on any given night. Big O's collegiate marks outstripped even those of Baylor, the player to whom he is most compared. Whether he will be able to revive the Royals as much as Baylor revived the Lakers, everyone is waiting anxiously to see. There is almost unanimous agreement among the so-called experts that Big O can't miss being a great one. Besides Twyman, No. 2 scorer in the NBA last season, the Royals rely on 6-10 center Phil Jordan of Whitworth, hulky 6-8 Wayne Embry of Miami, and sometimes brilliant Hub Reed in the front line. Dayton's Arlen Bockhorn, Memphis State's Win Wilfong and Kentucky's Phil Rollins are the returning backline performers.

Kansas State's Bob Boozer, No. 1 draft choice two years ago before casting his lot with the AAU, could be a tremendous asset. Coach Charley Wolf, a newcomer to the pro ranks, brings with him a reputation of being an aggressive, intelligent young coach. As coach of little Villa Madonna College, he had a tremendous winning record.

This Cincinnati team surely will be much better this season.

THE 1959-60 NBA SEASON IN REVIEW

The 1959-60 National Basketball Association was the greatest in the 14-year-old history of the league.

Philadelphia's fabulous Wilt The Stilt Chamberlain cracked eight individual NBA scoring records and the Boston Celtics won the league championship for the second straight time. This combination helped the loop to an overall attendance record and an increase of 23 per cent over the previous season.

The 7-1 Chamberlain, a once-in-a-lifetime rookie, proved boxoffice and court dynamite at home and away. Philadelphia drew a banner 236,833 fans at home and on the road the Warriors and Wilt played before 405,212 spectators in 42 games.

Boston compiled a 56-19 record, once running off 17 straight victories, topping the 100-point scoring mark in all but one of their 75 games—and whipping St. Louis 4-3 in the championship playoff.

New York drew an all-time record attendance for 30 home games of 332,575, helped by a Madison Square Garden double-header crowd of 18,496 which saw Boston battle Philadelphia in the opener.

Chamberlain established these new individual records:

Most points in a season	2,707
Highest game average for season	37.6
Most field goals attempted	2,311
Most field goals scored	1,065
Most free throws attempted	991
Most rebounds	1,941
Highest rebound average	26.9 per game
Most games with 50 or more points	5

Other record-makers included:

Elgin Baylor, Lakers, highest single game scoring total	64
Bob Cousy, Boston, most assists for season	715
Bill Russell, Boston, most rebounds, one game	51

Syracuse's Dolph Schayes became the first player to scale the 15,000 point plateau with a total of 15,798.

Joining the 10,000 point club were Larry Foust and Bob Pettit of St. Louis and Carl Braun of New York.

Boston's Bob Cousy also became the first player to post more than 5,000 assists.

24-SECOND RULE

A team in control of the ball must make an attempt to score within 24 seconds after gaining control of the ball. To constitute a legal attempt to score the following two conditions must be complied with:

A. The ball must leave the player's hands prior to the expiration of 24 seconds.

B. The ball must hit the rim or a legal surface of the backboard.

If there is a question as to whether or not an attempt to score has been made within 24 seconds, and there is doubt in the mind of the official as to whether or not the rule has been violated, the final decision shall be made by the referees on the floor who shall, in the event of doubt as to the expiration of 24 seconds, give the player the benefit of the doubt if the ball hits the rim or a legal surface of the blackboard.

If a ball is touched by a defensive player who does not gain control, the timer shall continue to run.

If a defensive player causes a ball to go out of bounds, the timer is stopped and the offensive team shall, on regaining control of the ball on the playing court, have the unexpired time or 10 seconds, whichever is longer, to continue control of the ball.

If during any regulation period or overtime period the game clock or watch shall indicate that there are 24 or fewer seconds remaining until the end of the period, the timer shall be stopped.

NATIONAL BASKETBALL ASSOCIATION RULES

The National Basketball Association not only presents the world's greatest basketball players but has been a leader in creation of certain rules designed to make the game more exciting and interesting.

For instance, it was the NBA which first established the 12-foot free-throw lanes, now used universally. To better understand and enjoy the game, watch for these changes from college rules:

1. Each of the four periods is 12 minutes long, making a 48-minute game.
2. The 24-second rule — The offensive team is required to shoot within 24 seconds after obtaining possession of the ball. Failure to shoot at or hit the basket within the required time results in loss of the ball. Timing clocks are located at the floor level at each end of the court marking the time in full view of the players and fans.
3. Players are limited to six personal fouls, after which is disqualification.
4. Each team is allowed a total of six personal fouls per quarter. Each foul in excess of six in a quarter is penalized by a bonus free throw. (However, no infraction can result in more than two successful free throws.) In overtime periods, each team is limited to three personal fouls before the bonus rule goes into effect.
5. Zone defense is prohibited. The penalty is a technical foul. Possession is also retained by the offensive team.
6. During the last two minutes of the game, the time clock is stopped anytime the ball goes out of bounds.
7. If a team is in clear control of the ball in its backcourt, and while in such clear control, a foul is committed against a member of the team, that foul is penalized by two free throws.
8. An offensive foul (a foul committed by the team possessing the ball) shall count as a personal foul against the individual but does not count as a team foul. Loss of the ball is the penalty. (This foul is most frequently called for charging or blocking.)
9. Five charged time-outs will be allowed to each team during regular playing time. One additional time out is allowed each time for every overtime period. One additional time out is also allowed each team in nationally-televised games.

LAKERS BRING MOST SUCCESSFUL BIG LEAGUE BASKETBALL FRANCHISE TO LOS ANGELES

Los Angeles, sports capital of the world, welcomes the Lakers—professional basketball's most successful franchise.

This is in keeping with the precedent and tradition of two other great sports teams which moved west to Los Angeles — the Cleveland Rams in football in 1946 and the Brooklyn Dodgers in baseball in 1958. Both brought with them championship heritages, just as the Lakers do as the winningest team in the annals of Major League Professional Basketball.

In one of sports' most fabulous "rags-to-riches" stories, the Lakers in 13 seasons have won six world championships and five divisional titles—a record which stands head and shoulders above that compiled by any of the other seven cities in the NBA.

Jim Pollard

The world championship seasons were 1948-49-50-52-53-54, an era of sensational success in which big George Mikan and Jim Pollard, the former Stanford All-American, played the leading roles. With the retirement of Mikan and Pollard, Laker fortunes declined until the 1958-59 season when the electrifying Elgin Baylor — in his rookie season led the Lakers back to the heights they once knew.

George Mikan

After finishing second in the Western Division, the Lakers, catching fire in the playoffs behind the hardwood heroics of Baylor, bowled over divisional king St. Louis on their way to a championship playoff series with Boston.

The Lakers were beaten by Boston for the world title, but it marked their renaissance and the advent of the Baylor era which continued last season as Elgin led them to an exciting seven-game-showdown with St. Louis for the Western Division crown.

So it is on this return to the glorious victorious pages of the past that the Lakers, with that one super star who spells success, bring Professional Big League Basketball to a deserving Los Angeles.

The Laker heritage is a rich one, both in championships and players who made them possible.

Besides Mikan, "Mr. Basketball" who was voted the "Player of the Half Century," and Pollard, "The Kangaroo Kid," the Laker history book is splashed with other great stars.

Vern Mikkelsen

Vern Mikkelsen, "The Durable Dane," who teamed with Mikan and Pollard to give the Lakers a fearsome frontline during their Golden era, is another great name. In the back court was the little Texan, 5-10 Slater Martin, considerd by many the finest small man in pro cage history. Their coach for 12 seasons was Johnny Kundla, now at the University of Minnesota where he was an All-American.

Slater Martin

The Lakers came into being as a franchise in 1947 when three Minneapolis businessmen purchased the defunct Detroit franchise in the National Basketball League for $15,000.

They invested another $15,000 in the purchase of two former University of Minnesota stars, Tony Jaros and Don Carlson from the Chicago team.

Pollard joined the fold when the new owners convinced him to turn pro and leave the Oakland Bittners of the AAU league.

Then followed Mikan in the lucky break that made the Lakers famous. They received the rights to him when the American Basketball conference in which he was playing following his winning of All-American honors at DePaul collapsed.

In 1948 the Lakers along with Indianapolis and Fort Wayne left the NBL to join the Basketball Association of America, which later became known as the National Basketball Association, its present name.

THE LAKERS' FRED SCHAUS
Coach With Winning Tradition

The new coach of the Los Angeles Lakers — Fred A. Schaus — brings with him two prime ingredients for success— a winning record as a college coach and experience as a player in the National Basketball Association. In six years at West Virginia, his alma mater, he compiled a record of 146 victories against 37 defeats — a success story unprecedented among young major college cage coaches.

Included in his victory bag was a Southern Conference title every one of his six years as he built the Mountaineers into one of the nation's leading powers. In 1959 he brought West Virginia to the NCAA finals, where his club lost to California 71-70.

The 35-year-old Schaus, who stands an impressive 6-5 and weighs 230 pounds, joins two of his stars on the Lakers, rookie Jerry West and Hot Rod Hundley, now starting his fourth season in the National Basketball Association.

As a pro, Schaus played in the NBA five years, four with Fort Wayne (now Detroit) and one with New York before returning to West Virginia to become head coach.

In his rookie year as a pro he led Fort Wayne in scoring, and was named to the all-NBA team.

A hard-nosed, driving, aggressive performer, he averaged 12.2 points a game while displaying the leadership ability which stamped him as a great coaching prospect.

Schaus is married to the former Barbara Scheer of Morgantown, West Virginia. They have two sons, John Wayne, 7, and James Robert, one.

He holds a Masters Degree in Physical Education.

JERRY WEST

Age: 22

Height: 6-3

Weight: 180

School: West Virginia, 1960

Pro Experience: Rookie

Unanimous selection for the All-American team for the second straight year, the West Virginia flash is considered by many to be the best basketball player of his general size ever to come from the college ranks . . . standout of the Olympic cage champs of the Rome Games, Jerry was the Lakers No. 1 draft choice . . . he has been described as college basketball's top defensive player—who happens to average more than 29 points per game . . . he even jumped center for the Mountaineers and controlled the tap 80% of the time . . . he has every shot in the book and maintained a varsity career average in excess of 50% . . . blessed with lightning reflexes, his passing is just as uncanny as his shooting and defensive play . . . though only 6-3 in height, he jumps so well that his rebound total almost matched that of West Virginia's next three rebounders combined . . . saving his best for the top competition, Jerry tied the NCAA tournament scoring record in 1959 and ran away with the "Most Valuable Player" honor . . . he always maintained a higher-scoring average in games away from home than on the friendly home court . . . a June graduate of West Virginia, Jerry comes from Cabin Creek, West Virginia . . . with the Lakers, he joins Hot Rod Hundley, in whose All-American shoes he followed, to give Los Angeles an All-West Virginia backcourt . . . Coach Fred Schaus, who had them both as collegians, never lost a Southern Conference championship during their playing days . . . like Baylor, West has made every All-American team in sight, in addition to being named Most Valuable Player of his conference and many tournaments plus the East-West All-Star game . . . he broke every West Virginia statistical record except single game points . . . in 1959, his 160 points in five games tied the NCAA tournament scoring record . . . a living example of sportsmanship, he does his job unselfishly . . . he plays all over the court but doesn't have to have the ball to be effective . . . his physical attributes include terrific spring in his legs, a lithe and slender body which enables him to glide almost like a spirit, lightning reflexes, a soft-shooting touch, an exceptionally-fast first step and straightaway speed . . . he married his college sweetheart . . . as an NBA rookie, he may provide the answer to the question as to whom was the outstanding collegian of the past season—he or Oscar Robertson.

RUDY LaRUSSO

Age: 23

Height: 6-7

Weight: 220

School: Dartmouth, 1959

Pro Experience: One season

Perhaps the best No. 2 draft choice in the history of the NBA, Rudy was the big surprise of the 1959-60 season as he ranked behind only Wilt Chamberlain as the league's top rookie . . . Rudy personifies the courageous, raw-boned athlete who seems to get the most from the talents at his disposal . . . he ranks as one of the strongest men in the NBA . . . in this league where strength is often the most telling factor, Rudy always gets the assignment of guarding the opponents top-scoring forward . . . his combination of alertness and aggressiveness has made him one of the outstanding defenders in the NBA . . . last season the Lakers were looking for the forward to play opposite Elgin Baylor . . . his main function was to provide solid defense and tough rebounding, a pretty big task for any rookie . . . Rudy got his big chance when the season was but a month old . . . not only did he provide the defense but he proved to be the team's No. 2 rebounder (679) and also its No. 2 scorer with 975 points, a 13.7 average per game . . . his average might have finished higher except for an injured right hand, his shooting hand . . . he played over six weeks with his wrist taped before the schedule allowed sufficient time for an X-ray examination . . . it turned out he was playing with a broken bone all that time . . . his raw-boned courage won him great admiration from fans around the NBA . . . Rudy wasn't just a good scorer in games that were pretty well lost . . . he proved that in the playoffs by averaging 15.4 points per game . . . his defense of Bob Pettit almost pulled out the semi-finals series for the underdog Lakers . . . Rudy specializes in the one-hand push shot as well as overpowering opponents for close-in jump shots . . . a graduate of James Madison high school in Brooklyn, Rudy became one of Dartmouth's most outstanding cagers ever . . . he scored 226, 412 and 529 points in three successive seasons, averaging 18.9 points per game his final year . . . he won All-Ivy and District NCAA honors his final two years . . . relatively unnoticed, a strong recommendation from his coach, Doggy Julian, led to the Lakers drafting him . . . after three years in Liberal Arts, Rudy entered the Amos Tuck School and graduated with a degree in Business Administration . . . hobbies are water color and oil painting . . . he's the newest married man on the Lakers squad, taking a bride this summer.

TOM HAWKINS

Age: 23

Height: 6-5

Weight: 210

College: Notre Dame, 1959

Pro Experience: One season

The Lakers No. 1 draft choice last season, Hawkins was ranked among the outstanding rookies in the NBA . . . as satisfactory as were his statistical marks, they undoubtedly would have been brighter had an early season ankle injury not rendered him relatively ineffective for an extended period . . . despite his limited size, only the likes of Chamberlain and Russell can leap higher among his NBA opponents . . . the first thing an average fan notices about Tom is his amazing spring . . . although a great shot blocker, Tom had to overcome a tendency to get faked off his feet while learning the defensive ropes last season . . . amazingly enough, he seldom gets one of his shots blocked . . . he specializes in the short jump shot . . . the experience he gained last season should be valuable in abetting the Lakers expected rise in the NBA standings . . . Tom ranks as the finest cager in the history of Notre Dame basketball . . . he was a product of Parker high school in Chicago before enrolling at the South Bend institution in 1955 . . . he started every game in his three years on the varsity except three missed because of an ankle injury in his senior year . . . his three-year total of 1820 points, season high of 730, and game mark of 43 (vs. Air Force) are all records . . . Hawkins finished his sophomore year with 576 points . . . . in his junior year, his finest, he scored 730 points (24.5 average) and led his mates to their second straight NCAA tourney . . . despite a losing senior season, Tom scored 514 points (23.4 average) and was named to several All-American teams . . . he hit over 30 points per game on five occasions . . he graduated with a B.S. degree . . . Lakers scouts spotted his speed, good rebounding ability, a beautiful shooting touch, and a team-desire excelled by none . . . needing a replacement for the retired Vern Mikkelsen, all-time Lakers great, they selected Hawkins No. 1 over John Green of Michigan State, now of the New York Knicks . . . his aggressiveness earned him 428 rebounds, third best team mark . . . he scored 546 points (7th ranking) . . . averaged 7.9 points per game (6th ranking) . . . played 1467 minutes (5th ranking) . . . shot field goals at .379 (5th ranking) . . . Tom and his wife, Doris, have settled in Los Angeles where he has begun off-season work with North American Life & Casualty Company.

ELGIN BAYLOR

Age: 25

Height: 6-5

Weight: 230

College: Seattle University, 1958
College of Idaho

Pro Experience: Two seasons

Unquestionably the most spectacular player in the game, Elgin Baylor never ceases to amaze his followers with his unbelievable feats on the court . . . he combines quickness, agility, magnificent timing, body control, and physical strength —all the assets a great athlete must possess . . . his past record is one of continually surpassing his previous achievements . . . here are just a few his first two NBA seasons have produced: 64 points (vs. Boston) in one game, greatest single game ever in NBA history . . . named to NBA All-League team both years . . . "Rookie of the Year" for the greatest opening season of any individual to that date . . . Co-Most Valuable Player of the NBA All-Star game while scoring 25 points in his rookie season . . . ranking among the top four in both scoring and rebounding both seasons . . . named Hickok Pro Athlete of Month in rookie year . . . became fourth player in NBA history to score over 2,000 points in one season . . . broke almost every Laker scoring record set by the incomparable George Mikan . . . led his team from the NBA cellar to the championship finals in a single season . . . these feats unquestionably rate Baylor consideration for a niche among the All-Time greats of basketball . . . Baylor is probably most effective in close where his amazing variety of maneuvers make it impossible for any one man (any size) to defense him . . . he also possesses a deadly jump shot from outside and is a master at "sliding" in against an unsuspecting foe . . . his 24.9 points per game was the greatest rookie average until Chamberlain came along . . . he set a rookie mark of 55 points in one game during that campaign . . . Elgin was averaging over 35 points per game that first month of last season before he was weakened by the virus (missed five straight games and didn't regain his strength for a month) . . . finished fast and averaged 29.6 points per game . . . Baylor starred at Springarm High, Washington, D. C., scoring 2,375 points in three seasons . . . played one season at College of Idaho before transferring to Seattle U. where he gained All-American honors for two seasons and led the Chiefs to the NCAA finals in 1958 . . . ranked among the NCAA's top three scorers and rebounders botn seasons . . . he averaged 29.7 points (743 points) and 32.5 points (943 points) and won every All-Tournament, Most Valuable Player, and All-American honor in sight.

PRO BASKETBALL'S GREATEST SCORING EFFORT
BAYLOR'S 64 POINTS ON NOVEMBER 8, 1959

To the electrifying Elgin Baylor, the Los Angeles Lakers' super star, goes the honor of the greatest scoring night in the history of Professional Basketball — 64 points in one game!

And there's no one to say that he's not capable of breaking his own record set November 8, 1959, against the world champion Boston Celtics.

Playing on his home court at the Minneapolis Auditorium in his second season as a pro, Baylor went on a scoring binge that wiped from the record books the old mark of 63 posted by gunner Joe Fulks of Philadelphia in 1949.

Red-hot both from the field and from the free throw line, Baylor had the crowd roaring with anticipation and encouragement as he bettered Fulks' record and his own personal high of 55 points set in his "rookie-of-the-year" season.

Hitting jumps, tips and drive-ins, he connected on 25 of 47 field goal attempts. Making the performance all the more remarkable was that he did it without being a shot-hog as he passed up many opportunities in favor of feeding teammates he thought were in better-shooting positions. He actually led both teams in assists with eight.

From the free throw line he swished 14 of 19 attempts, the desperate Celtics fouling him repeatedly.

Scoring 13 points in the first quarter, 12 in the second and 17 in the third, Baylor, in a typical clutch performance poured in 22 points in the final period.

With everyone, including Baylor and the Celtics realizing the record was within his grasp, Baylor made it with 31 seconds to play, hitting a driving jump shot from 10 feet out. His 62nd point had come on a free throw with one minute, 14 seconds left.

Almost lost in the excitement of the superlative effort was the final score: Lakers 136, Boston 115 — their first victory over the Celtics in 22 games spanning three seasons.

THE WORLD CHAMPION BOSTON CELTICS

ROD HUNDLEY

Age: 26

Height: 6-4

Weight: 195

College: West Virginia, 1957

Pro Experience: Three seasons

The Lakers dashing "Hot Rod" finally found himself last season and established himself as one of the finest backcourtsmen in the NBA . . . certainly one of the league's top crowd-pleasers, Hot Rod dazzles the fans with his "sleight-of-hand" maneuvers . . . he's tops as the middleman on the fast-break with his pin-point passing or with a deadly jump shot . . . he's been the Lakers top playmaker since joining the team and last season hit a career high of 338 assists . . . he also boosted his scoring into the double figures for the first time with a 12.8 average and surprised with unusually good defense . . . this season under his old college mentor, Fred Schaus, Hot Rod hopes to lead the Lakers to the winning ways he knew as a collegian when his team won the Southern Conference Championship three successive years . . . . it will be interesting to note the success of the "West Virginia backcourt" now that Jerry West, Hot Rod's All-American successor at the Mountaineer school, joins him with the Lakers . . . both are considered "untouchables" in the trading mart . . . born in Charleston, West Virginia, Hot Rod learned much of his ball handling skill from George King, ex-NBA star and new West Virginia coach who was also a Charleston native . . . after a fantastic prep career, Hot Rod was perhaps the most sought-after prep cager in the country . . . under the mentoring of Schaus, he made cage history at West Virginia . . . during his three-year career, he made every All-American, All-Section, All-Conference team in the country . . . despite a knee operation performed in 1954, Rod scored 711 points (23.7 average) as a sophomore . . . as a junior he improved that mark to 798 points (26.6 average) and led the Mountaineers in every department . . . he scored 671 points (23.1 average) his final year . . . his career total made him the fourth man in collegiate history to go over 2,000 . . . Hot Rod came to the Lakers four seasons ago in the big trade involving Clyde Lovellette . . . got his big chance as a regular last season and the results were tremendous . . . named to Western Division All-Star team for East-West game . . . Hot Rod was No. 2 behind Baylor in minutes played.

JIM KREBS

Age: 25

Height: 6-8

Weight: 230

College: Southern Methodist, 1957

Pro Experience: Three seasons

A "new" Krebs could easily be the key to the immediate rise of the rebuilding-Lakers surge into the high echelons of the NBA . . . although somewhat of a disappointment in his first three pro seasons. Jim is just now reaching the physical maturity necessary to compete against the powerful pivotmen in this fiercest of all cage loops . . . he has all the attributes excepting speed . . . a solid man in the center position is the Lakers most crying need and with renewed appreciation for his talents, Jim could be the man to fill the post . . . what makes Jim most valuable is his accurate one-hand jump shot from the corner . . . his outside shooting touch enables him to take opposing centers away from the basket, thus giving Baylor more maneuvering room in the pivot, where he is most dangerous . . . Jim has proved most effective, strangely enough, against the NBA's top centers — Russell and Chamberlain — both of whom are reluctant to stray too far from the basket . . . it is against these foes that he must be most effective to swing the balance of power to the Lakers . . . Jim came to the Lakers as their No. 1 draft choice four seasons ago touted as a great hook-shooter (he seldom uses that shot now) . . . during his three seasons in the NBA, he has been one of his team's top field goal shooters (he's reluctant to take a bad shot) . . . most effective when given sufficient rest . . . watch him on defense . . . slickest shot-blocker in the NBA . . . a product of Webster Groves, Missouri (St. Louis suburb) high school, Jim matriculated at SMU where he made Southwest Conference history . . . led his Mustangs to three straight SWC championships and made the all-star team each year . . . as a sophomore, broke all SMU scoring marks with 555 points (21.3 average) . . . as a junior, developed his one-hander and scored 574 points (19.1 average) and led his team to the NCAA Western finals before losing to Bill Russell and San Francisco U. . . . his senior year was his greatest as he scored 624 (24.0 average), won the SWC scoring title with 278 points, losing out to Kansas and Wilt Chamberlain in the NCAA tourney . . . he set 16 SMU scoring marks before graduating.

RAY FELIX

Age: 30

Height: 6-11

Weight: 220

School: Long Island, 1953

Pro Experience: Seven seasons

The tallest, oldest, and most experienced "pro" on the Lakers, Ray is the "old-timer with a new look" . . . once a consistently high-scoring center, Ray seemed to have lost his reflexes and was farmed out to the Eastern League by the Knicks last season . . . his big problem was that he couldn't hang on to the quick pass into the pivot and seemed to let sure rebounds slip off his fingertips . . . during the off-season, the Lakers management suggested an eye examination . . . Ray had his eyes thoroughly examined and as a result is now wearing contact lenses . . . his tendency to mishandle the ball may be a thing of the past . . . no team can win without the good big man in the NBA and Ray may be the Lakers best bet until a promising young center can be drafted . . . obtained about two-thirds of the way through last season, Ray gave the Lakers improved protection against high-scoring giants . . . rebounded well . . . in five seasons with the Knicks never failed to appear in every game on the schedule — a remarkable record of durability . . . also, he never averaged less than 12 points per game . . . despite his limited playing time, he ranked No. 5 among the Lakers in rebounding, but never got into high-gear in the scoring department, although he showed occasional flashes of brilliance . . . with the probability of regular service this season, the Lakers undoubtedly will plan some offensive patterns to make use of his potential scoring-punch . . . Ray never gives less than his best . . . his intense desire to keep an opponent from scoring frequently finds him in "foul" trouble . . . a finely-conditioned Felix can solve the Lakers' greatest problem—the need for that good big man who can score, rebound and defend against the likes of Chamberlain and Russell.

BOB LEONARD

Age: 28

Height: 6-3

Weight: 190

School: Indiana, 1954

Pro Experience: Four seasons

Although he's only 28, Bob is the Lakers' veteran in terms of service to the team . . . he'll be starting his fifth season, which equals the entire front line of Baylor-LaRusso-Hawkins-Jolliff put together . . . he's the team's "slick" operator which led to this nickname his mates have pinned on him . . . as captain of the team last season, Bob personified the fighting spirit now becoming the Lakers' trademark . . . a tenacious defender, Bob usually gets the job of guarding the opponents' best-scoring little man . . . although slowed some as a result of knee injury sustained two seasons ago, Bob still has the quick reactions and ability to change directions quickly in pursuit of the fastest opponents . . . he's a real battler . . . once the finest two-hand, set-shot artist in the NBA, Bob lost the touch last season — it is hoped that the new environment of the Los Angeles Arena will cure this . . . he shot only .322 on field goal tries last season . . . Bob is toughest offensively when his set-shot is hitting and opponents must press him closely . . . this opens up his opportunities for the drive at which he is one of the best in the NBA . . . he ranked No. 4 in playing-time last season, averaging just under 30 minutes per game . . . Leonard graduated from Gerstmeyer High School in Terre Haute, Indiana, touted as one of the Hoosier state's most outstanding preps . . . at Indiana he went on to become one of its greatest basketball products . . . played regularly during his three seasons, the Hoosiers winning 59 games while losing only 13 . . . his team won two Big Ten championships . . . thanks to Leonard, they also won the NCAA title in 1953 . . . he averaged 14.5, 16.3 and 15.4 points per game in accumulating a career total of 1098 points . . . Bob was named to most All-American teams during his career . . . Most Valuable Player of the East-West game in 1954 . . . drafted by Baltimore in 1954 but did not play that season because Uncle Sam decided the Army was for him . . . when he was discharged Baltimore had folded and Bob signed with the Lakers . . . perennially hampered by injuries, Bob could enjoy another great season if he can stay healthy.

FRANK SELVY

Age: 28

Height: 6-3

Weight: 180

School: Furman, 1954

Pro Experience: Five seasons

After four seasons of seeking to regain his rookie form, Frank "re-arrived" in the late stages of the 1959-60 campaign and seems ready to make a do-or-die effort to regain his ranking as one of the NBA's top guards . . . around the NBA, Frank has been known as the "travelin' man" . . . he's played for six teams and says he won't play for another . . . this is his second tour with the Lakers . . . Frank had a fantastic reputation when he came into the NBA from Furman where he set an all-time three-year mark by scoring over 2,000 points . . . he was the property of Baltimore but the franchise folded shortly after the 1954-55 season started and he was picked up by Milwaukee . . . teaming with Bob Pettit (two flashier rookies have seldom played on the same team) Frank scored 1,348 points, an average of 19.0 points per game . . . Pettit, rookie of the year, averaged only one more . . . the next season when the franchise was shifted to St. Louis, Frank played only 17 games before leaving for a two-year tour of Army service . . . after being away from NBA competition for two seasons, he returned to find a new pattern of play, emphasis being on set plays to Pettit and Hagan . . . he saw almost no action, appearing only 426 minutes in 38 games, averaging 3.6 points per game . . . he was traded conditionally to the Lakers near seasons' end but was reclaimed by St. Louis . . . traded to New York in 1958 and started on the comeback trail, averaged 9.8 points per game . . . last season was shuttled off to Syracuse where he played 19 games as a spot player . . . at cutoff time, the Nats released him to the Lakers . . . it proved to be a break for both Frank and the Lakers . . . although generally regarded as a "gunner" Frank excels as an all-around performer . . . he has the quickest hands on the club, constantly stealing the ball from bewildered opponents . . . he's easily the fastest player on the team . . . specializes in the long two-hand push shot and is a blazing driver . . . holds NBA free throw record by making 24 of 26 in single game in rookie year.

HOWARD JOLLIFF

Age: 22

Height: 6-7

Weight: 210

A relatively-unheralded draft choice, Jolliff, on the basis of his exhibition schedule performance, looks to be another sleeper like Rudy LaRusso . . . he is expected to provide the same kind of tough-rebounding LaRusso furnished, lacks LaRusso's bulk, but has extremely long, graceful fingers which give him excellent ball control . . . practically out-rebounded the entire front-line of some of Ohio's opponents last season . . . one of his top performances was 29 points and 16 rebounds against Notre Dame as he led his team to an upset victory over the Irish in the first round of the NCAA tournament . . . during the regular campaign he was the bellwether in Ohio's drive to the Mid-America conference title . . . the spring-legged Jolliff was selected to the all-opponent teams of Notre Dame, Indiana and Western Kentucky, to mention three powerhouses, as well as many others . . . he was an unanimous all-NCAA regional selection, the only other unanimous choice being Ohio State's fabulous Jerry Lucas . . . can handle taller foes as he proved by playing Indiana's 6-10½ Walt Bellamy on even terms last season . . . had one year of college eligibility left . . . was drafted by the Lakers, however, because the class with which he started college has graduated . . . decided to forego his senior year for a whirl with the pros, a decision welcomed by the Lakers who feel the unmarried Canton, Ohio native is just what they need to bolster their front line forces.

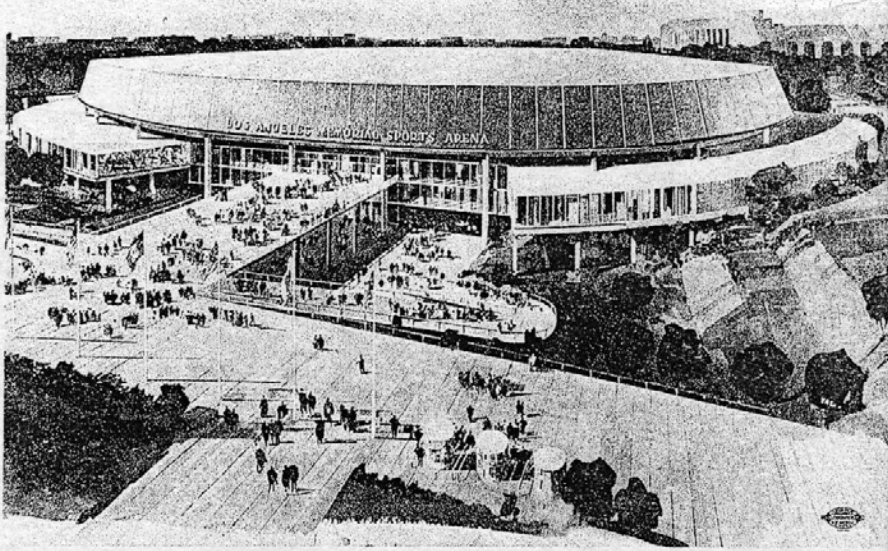
The New Home of
THE LAKERS



The Los Angeles Memorial Sports Arena . . . America's finest auditorium. Conceived as the ultimate in modern beauty, efficiency and flexibility, the Los Angeles Memorial Sports Arena, the new home of the Los Angeles Lakers, sets a precedent for indoor sports facilities. The twin level, totally air-conditioned arena has no posts to impair vision. Every seat is a foam rubber, upholstered, arm-chair, designed with "fireside" viewing in mind. Maximum seating capacity for basketball is 14,871. Situated just off the Harbor Freeway, the Arena is easily assessible to all parts of the Los Angeles area. The Los Angeles Lakers, in the newest city in the National Basketball Association, are proud to call the Memorial Sports Arena their home.
